Increasing Importance of the Asia-Pacific Region in the World:
The Need for Nurturing Highly-skilled Human Resources for Achieving Further Economic Development

The Asia-Pacific region has been achieving high economic growth for more than half a century since the end of the World War II, contributing to global economic growth. The Asia-Pacific has come to have strong influence on not only economic but also political and social aspects of the world. As a result of rapid economic growth, people’s income has increased remarkably in the Asia-Pacific. There is no doubt that this increase in income has led to material improvements in daily life. However, there still remain a number of serious problems, such as poverty, the income gap, the gender gap, environmental problems, territorial problems, and national security problems, all of which have strong impacts on our daily lives.

The Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies (GSAPS) is providing education and training to the students interested in and concerned with understanding and finding solutions to the problems noted above. The problems we face result from various factors involving a number of different academic disciplines. I would like to argue that the students need to acquire not only competitive capability in one of many disciplines including economics, political science, international relations, history, sociology, and others. It is also important for us not only to realize but also to accept the diversity in the ways of understanding and dealing with the problems, because even the seemingly same problems are likely to have different historical and social backgrounds reflecting different regions and countries. At GSAPS, we offer a program that aims to achieve this objective, with many notable features, which will be explained below.

First, at GSAPS, you will find a bilingual learning environment. Almost all the lecture courses are offered both in English and Japanese. You can pursue your academic degree either in only English or only Japanese. However, you are encouraged to study both in English and Japanese.

Second, GSAPS is an intellectual community of more than 400 graduate students (approximately 300 MA students and 150 Ph.D. students) coming from more than 50 countries. Approximately 20% of the students are from Japan, while 80% are international students.

Third, a number of lecture courses are offered both in English and Japanese. These lecture courses fall within 3 categories: “Asia Studies” in which you assess the situations in countries and territories in the Asia-Pacific, “International Relations” in which you analyze the inter-state relations and transnational relations of non-state actors such as private firms and NGOs, and “International Development and Policy Studies” in which you are challenged with how to tackle specific regional and global issues. In addition, there are several courses offered by lecturers who have experience in international cooperation, diplomacy, and journalism, which can help you translate the research into practice.

I truly hope that you join us to become a highly skilled talent of the future, who can solve or ameliorate the problems in the Asia-Pacific and other areas, through learning and conducting research at GSAPS.

MA Program

The MA Program in International Relations consists of three main fields of specialization, "Area Studies", "International Relations" and "International Development/Policy Studies". Students will focus on one, but, at the same time, they are allowed to attend courses in all three fields. Using a broad-based, multi-per- spectrum approach to analyzing the momentous changes taking place in the Asia-Pacific region, graduates of our program will be well-prepared to take on the region’s challenges and opportunities in a wide range of professional capacities.

[Academic Degree] Master of Arts in International Relations

[Enrollment Capacity] 130 students / year

[Early completion option] (1.5 year completion) 1. All the necessary credits for graduation obtained in one year, starting from the day after entrance (except project research). 2. 3.5 or above GPA obtained (at the end of the first year). 3. A score of 90 or above obtained for the project research.

Course Category Aims of Each Course Credit Requirement

Project Research Project Research is carried out in seminar style. Under the instruction of their academic advisors, students will learn and master skills to prepare and complete their thesis, to compile, analyze and review relevant information fully and to understand the research methodology. 8 credits

Core Courses / Basic Courses Core Courses and Basic Courses are designed to help students attain basic knowledge and skills necessary for completing their research projects. 22 credits

Advanced Courses Advanced Courses are designed to provide students with training in the acquisition of highly professional knowledge and in the effective application of those skills in one’s own field of research. Among the courses, subjects related to Japanese Studies aim to further promote the understanding of Japan using various approaches so as to meet the needs of our foreign students. Furthermore, in the category of ‘Special Seminars’ organized by our faculty, experts and researchers from external organizations are invited to deliver lectures, giving our students the latest perspectives on current hottest issues. Not counted for graduation

Optional Courses Optional Courses are designed to train students in other necessary skills, such as information analysis and computing and languages required for research activities. Credits for these courses will not be considered as a part of the completion (degree) requirements. Not counted for graduation

Partnerships with Eminent Overseas Universities
Under the exchange program scheme, students wishing to go on exchange will be able to choose from more than 400 partner universities in the world.

Center for International Education (CIE)

Under agreements with overseas partner universities as listed in the right box, GSAPS conducts exchange programs of its own. Students can attend either in spring or in autumn for one semester.

EAUI Summer School (Theory of Asian Regional Integration)

We offer Summer School which is a joint program between Korea University, Nanyang Technological University, Peking University, Thammasat University, and Waseda University. Every year, under different themes, leading scholars from those universities hold lectures. Student group presentations as well as field trips and international symposium will be also scheduled as a part of the program. Credits will be given to those who completed the course requirements.

Prof. KATSUMA Yasushi (Former staff member of UNICEF)

Many of the lecture courses at CGAPS are taught by professors and lecturers who have work experience in international organizations for global and regional governance and cooperation, including the United Nations, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank (ADB), as well as government agencies like the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), Japan’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MFA), Japan’s Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI) of Japan, and the United Nations.

Our courses on diplomacy, international civil service, international cooperation and media are in part designed to support career development among our graduate students. We would like our graduate students to "have a warm heart but a cool head" so that they can assess and analyze objectively the current prominent issues in the Asia-Pacific, and then take proactive action to promote global and regional governance and cooperation in solving problems.

Practical Approach course: Diplomacy (Professor) SHIBUKA Kazuo (Former diplomat)

Diplomacy

Dr. KATSUMA Yasushi

The reason I decided to start an internship was because I feel job skill has always been highly in demand, especially with countries as diverse as the Democratic Republic of the Congo, France, and Egypt. This class not only taught me about the foundations of diplomacy but also introduced me to the histories of various countries and as well as the various types of conflicts and poverty. Through the course, I became aware that diplomacy means more than promoting the national interest of one’s own country, it also deeply affects national policies and lives of citizens of other countries. After taking this course, I became interested in working in the field of diplomacy, especially in Africa.

Waseda University has over 5,000 international students enrolled from over 100 countries and regions. By making use of this international environment, Intercultural Communication Center (ICC) offers plenty of events which make you to deepen cross-cultural understanding. You will be able to interact with students with diverse background/experience from all over the world beyond the framework of your department.

Q.1 Why did you choose GSAPS for your higher education? What made you decide to choose GSAPS?

There are two main factors behind my decision to pursue a master's degree at GSAPS. Firstly, GSAPS provides professional courses across a wide range of disciplines, such as law, economics, politics, sociology, and history in both English and Japanese. This scheme allows students to choose courses based on both their interests and their capabilities. Secondly, the high percentage of international students at GSAPS creates a culturally inclusive environment for people from diverse backgrounds to freely express their own opinions and to participate fully in learning and social activities.

Q.2 Do you recommend GSAPS to those who are thinking of going to a graduate school?

Please kindly leave a short message for future GSAPS applicants.

Our Mission is to create a friendly environment in which students, staff and professors can bond and enjoy their life at GSAPS. This is why we are always looking forward to meeting new students and making friends from all over the world. The international environment of GSAPS is perfect for students to have new experiences such as cultural exchange while mingling with students from every corner of the world. The GSAS aims to offer opportunities for students to interact with each other, regardless of their nationality; to expand their understanding of global affairs to generate new ideas, and to become future leaders who have a strong understanding of world cultures as well as to help fulfill their academic and social interests. We are always open to new ideas and eager to work with new students. On behalf of the GSAS Council, I would like to welcome all new students, hoping that we can help you enjoy your time in GSAPS.

Q.3 What are your long-term goals?

Working as an international public servant at the United Nations has always been one of my ambitions. With a wide range of interests in international affairs, I will Without doubt make more efforts, academic and professional alike, so as to realize my personal goals.

Q.2 What kind of things you gained at GSAPS became useful/helpful for job hunting?

The experience of studying with international students from all over the world was useful when I tried to find a job. I thought that having studied with people from different backgrounds improves my work skills and makes me possible to take an interview confidently. Thanks for the experience in GSAPS, my job hunting was finished successfully and I’m going to work at the company which I really want.

Q.4 Do you recommend GSAPS to those who are interested in international relations?

Please kindly leave a short message for future GSAPS applicants.

There are two of treasures I have gained at GSAPS. First of all, I met lots of international students from all over the world and I experienced cultural differences during the Master’s course in GSAPS. This makes me easy to communicate with someone who isn’t the person from the country but an individual. Secondly, I learned many aspects of international relations such as law, education, economics, politics and development studies which I wasn’t interested in before the admission into GSAPS. This makes me easy to study all kinds of the international relations and improve my knowledge considerably.

I’d like to recommend GSAPS, as it not only provides a great academic atmosphere to pursue your higher education and endeavor for future career but also a place where you can create lifelong social network with people from different backgrounds through encouraging applicants to enjoy the studies at GSAPS and live a fruitful life in such a multicultural and diverse environment.
