

Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies (GSAPS), Waseda University
20th Anniversary Symposium

Dynamics of Integration and Division in the Asia-Pacific

Twenty years have passed since the founding of Waseda University's Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies. From the outset, its academic mission has been to train and to support "scholarly research from global and regional perspectives aimed at illuminating history, politics, economics, industry, management, societies, cultures, and transnational relations, with a focus on the Asia-Pacific region." Its broader goal, however, has been to ensure that the benefits of this scholarly research will contribute to society through the training of professionals with specialized knowledge and a commitment to solving problems. We take great pride in the international recognition we have earned in training a large number of talented people currently leading and building careers that reflect these analytical, intellectual, and social missions.

To commemorate our twentieth anniversary, we are hosting this international symposium that we hope will simultaneously reflect on lessons learned about the region and ask us to consider the challenges that lie ahead. To that end, we have chosen "Dynamics of Integration and Division in the Asia-Pacific" as the symposium's theme. As with the myriad challenges that directly confront international order, within the Asia-Pacific, the developments and problems that divide and unify the region are likely to be central concerns that define the region in the years to come. By taking a broad view and bringing together leading scholars from a wide variety of disciplinary, professional, and intellectual backgrounds, we will take the opportunity to consider how the research and training Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies has made a difference as well as how we can continue to make important contributions in the future.
